APOPLEXY. Persons below the middle height, robust, with large hands and short thick necks, are generally recognized as apoplectic subjects; but a foreign medical author asserts that it is confined to no particular conformation of the body, all persons being alike liable to be attacked by it. The predisposing causes are the habitual indulgence of the appetite in rich and gross food, or stimulating drinks, coupled with luxurious and indolent habits; sedentary employments carried to an undue length; the habit of sleeping, especially in a recumbent posture, after a full meal; and lying too long in bed. Persons, however, who are predisposed to this disease should not fail to profit by the warnings of its approach, such as giddiness, drowsiness, loss of memory, twitching of the nerves, faltering of the speech, &c. Their diet, should be light and nutritious; all luxurious habits should be abandoned, and moderate exercise should be
